A New Year, A New Look

by Jake Richter

Last year was our first one doing the Dive Log, and the reception the new look received was quite positive. However, we've learned a lot about newsletter production in the last year, and that's resulting in a few changes.

First of all, we want the newsletter to be a little more consistent in terms of timing. Therefore, the newsletter will be published 6 times a year instead of 8-10 times. Barring a disaster, you should always receive your newsletter during the first week of every other month, starting with January. In the off months, you will receive a one-page flyer with an updated calendar and reminder of any upcoming meetings, events, and scheduled dives. This same flyer will also be distributed in quantity to area dive shops to help make more New Hampshire divers aware that there in fact is a dive club in the state and a resource for finding dive buddies, new dive sites, and other information on local diving.

Next, you may have noticed a big picture on the cover of this issue. That's because we want to start featuring photos of local diving on the cover, preferably pictures provided by our members. Having different pictures on the cover for each issue will also let us avoid having to select a different paper color for each issue to prevent confusion. So, if you've got some great local dive photos, please submit them - prints, slides, and negatives are all acceptable. We have the technology!

Finally, we'll be making more minor adjustments in the way things are presented over the course of the next year. If you have any suggestions, or want to submit any articles (which we are always in need of), please send them our way (see next column for address).

Presidents Corner

by Phil Morrison

Hello, and welcome to another exciting year of diving and of the United Divers of New Hampshire. Many people use the beginning of a new year as an incentive to evaluate their lives and set some New Year's resolutions. The same is true of organizations such as UDNH. With the new year comes a new set of officers and a new set of goals and objectives. The first newsletter of the year seems like an appropriate place the incoming president to outline what he, and the other officers, perceive as the goals and philosophies of the club for the new year. So here goes.

First, and foremost, I believe that our main goal as a club should be to help club members become safer, more responsible, divers. Many non-divers consider divers to be "mavericks," "daredevils," or just plain "crazy" for doing something as "dangerous" as scuba diving. While it is true that divers practice their sport in a challenging and frequently hostile environment, the dangers associated with that environment can be minimized through common sense and training. We believe that this training should not be limited to the formal training received through open water and advanced certification courses. Diver education doesn't end with certification.

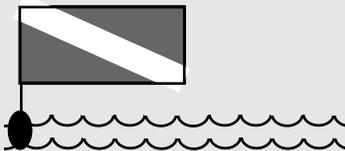

Education needs to continue throughout a diver's career by way of informal training. For this reason, a number of the club meetings will be used to provide training in various aspects of diving safety. Our new Dive Coordinator, Ken Anderson (soon to be a certified Divemaster), has already started putting together programs to address issues related to diver safety. This training will include actual dives as well as the club meetings and pool times. We also hope to offer club members the opportunity to take classes outside of the regular meetings on subjects important to divers.

Our second goal is, of course, to promote diving. More specifically than that, I believe we should do more to promote New England diving. While browsing through a newsgroup on the Internet recently, I came across a message from one diver, who was going to be visiting this area, who asked "Do people actually dive there?" And how many times have you been approached at one of your dives by people who ask "What is there to see down there?" Divers from other areas of the country are usually amazed at the wonders that can be found right off our own coast. Yet many of our own club members refuse to dive anywhere that you need a wetsuit. So what can we do to convince people that diving in New England can be just as thrilling (and a lot less expensive) as their last warm-water dive trip? One way will be by having many of the club meetings focusing on New England dive sites and activities. Now, this isn't to say that we will totally ignore warm-water diving. I know we all love to see pictures and hear stories from one another's dive trips. We will continue to have these types of programs. We also hope to plan more club dives that will help draw club members together.

Do you have a favorite local dive site? Why not tell the club all about it by writing an article for the newsletter? Starting with the next issue, this year's newsletter is going to have a section called "My Favorite Local Dive Site" which will be reserved for articles written by our own club members. Also, if you would be willing to coordinate a dive to that site, please contact Ken Anderson.

Finally, I see the UDNH helping to introduce new divers to the sport and get them started on the right path. I personally know several people who have completed their open water certification course and may have done a dive or two following certification but have essentially hung it up. I am sure that you can think of one or two as well. Why does this happen? I believe that part of the blame must rest with those of us who have been diving for a while. Quite often, new divers will end up making their first dives with another member of their class because they don't know any experienced divers well enough to ask for guidance. This usually turns out to be a less- than-thrilling experience. However, if they can get hooked up with more accomplished divers who are willing and eager to share their experience, that first dive can be a pleasant experience and get them even more excited about diving. That's what I perceive to be one of the most important jobs of the dive club: as a forum where new divers can meet more experienced divers and begin their informal training on their way to becoming safer, more responsible divers. So, when was the last time you invited a new diver to join you at your favorite dive site?

Well, that is a not-so-brief idea of what I, and the other officers, would like to see happen this year. Of course, a lot of it depends on you, and your willingness to participate in club meetings, to write articles for the newsletter, to join (or even lead) club dives, and to welcome new divers into the fold. I'm looking forward to a great year. I hope you are too.

UDNH Gains a New Board for 1996

At the last meeting of the club last year, the membership elected a new roster of officers to serve as the Board of the United Divers of New Hampshire. Our new President is long time member, Phil Morrison, last year's Treasurer. In the role of Vice President, Rick Bardsley was elected. Jake Richter was elected Secretary, while his wife Linda was elected Treasurer. Last, but not least, Ken Anderson, a Divemaster in training, is the UDNH Dive Coordinator for 1996. The new Board will be greeting the membership at the first meeting of the new year, on January 15th at the Manchester YMCA.

Many thanks go to the 1995 Board for a job well done - Wayne Russell, President, Jim Fredricks - Vice President, Don Eva - Secretary, Phil Morrison - Treasurer, and Jim Davis - Dive Coordinator.

UDNH Loses A Dear Friend

Roland Sallada, 78, passed away on December 1, 1995. Roland was the State Representative from New Boston who sponsored a Dive Flag bill that the United Divers of New Hampshire had been trying to get put into law. The purpose of the bill was to protect divers from boaters, in memory of club member Jay Lewis, who died as a result of being hit by a boat while he was diving in New Hampshire waters. Thanks to Roland's help, the club was able to get the State to put into law regulations covering the proper use of the red and white dive flag. He will be sorely missed. Roland's wish in the event of his death that donations made in his memory be made to the charity of choice of the donor. A person close to Roland suggested that perhaps the Club's Jay Lewis Fund might be an appropriate choice, based on the club's relationship with Roland.

They Really Are Blue!

Article and Photos by Carl Greenbaum

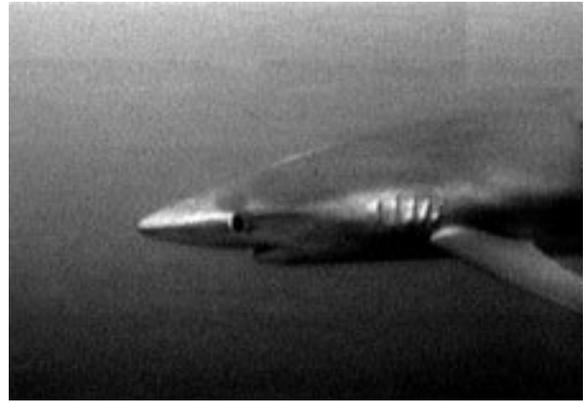

With three divers already in the water, I figured it was my turn. I rolled over the transom into the pleasant (for New England) 66 degree water. I reached up for my video housing and turned to swim towards the shark cage about 15 feet away.

HELLO!!!! Swimming at arms length alongside me was an eight foot male Blue Shark. Wow, this is a beautiful animal; wow, he's close; I think I'll put the housing between me and the shark; Oh yea, I might as well press the record button and shoot some video. It felt a bit bizarre as the shark seemed to escort me to the door of the cage before swimming off. Sort of "Putting me in my place".

So began my first "shark cage" diving adventure. I was 44 miles south of Pt. Judith, Rhode Island aboard Capt. Charlie Donilon's 35 foot sport fisherman, Snappa. It was a trip I'd wanted to do since the first time I met Charlie and his big shark cage at Sea Rovers. I signed up in the spring for a September trip that Brian Skerry was booking.

After the seemingly endless ride offshore, Charlie found a charter boat fishing for tuna that had already attracted a pair of sharks. We pulled up and began to chum. Within a few minutes the sharks swam over to Snappa and the other boat that motored off to fish in peace while we had sharks ready for diving.

Even from the surface these are surprisingly beautiful animals. In the bright sunlight their upper flanks were a bright iridescent blue. As they swam around behind the boat I realized they were nearly as long as the Snappa is wide. These are sleek pelagic animals whose streamlined shape makes them seem less bulky hence less intimidating. Notice I said "less". These animals still deserve respect and caution.

Meanwhile back at the cage, there were now three blue sharks swimming around, attracted by Charlie's continuous chumming with pieces of butterfish. The cage floats on four mooring balls on about eight foot lines so the cage is well underwater. The 2 to 4 foot surface swell caused the cage to jump up and down. There was one other diver in the cage and after about 20 minutes he left to join Brian and the other divers swimming free with the sharks. The sharks were cruising around without apparent agitation (more than I could say for myself with the cage jumping up and down). After about 40 minutes I decided to leave the cage. The sharks were calm and with five divers in the water the odds were in my favor. None came really close but I was glad to have the video housing to fend them off if need be. The video I shot at about this time was weird. Here are four divers in the open water with sharks swimming among them and then the camera pans past the empty cage with the door open.

My most anxious moments came when I followed one animal as he swam into deeper water. When he finally swam off into the gloom I realized I was at 50 feet, out of sight of the boat and the cage. Not too bright I thought. As I turned in slow circles ascending towards the surface my imagination kept wanting to form shark images in the murky water. After that I stayed close to the cage. After about 70 minutes in the water we all headed for the boat.

During our lunch break Charlie continued chumming to keep the sharks around. Actually he did better than that. In the hour I was out of the water the local shark population doubled. With six or seven sharks in the area during the second dive I stayed in or near the cage. I tried to identify the individual animals; one with monofilament streaming from his pectoral fin; one with a fish hook sticking out of his jaw; two with different bright blue paint blotches on their heads from bumping Snappa's bottom and one with an escort of two pilot fish. After another 50 minutes in the water I was ready to dry out. Although my SPG read 1500 psi, I think my adrenaline supply was near zero.

A distant school of dolphins didn't come our way and after some shark tagging we hauled the cage in and headed home. We pulled into Galilee after dark but the ocean sunset we saw enroute was ample compensation.

At $150, this shark dive was originally in the category of a one time adventure for me - now I'm not so sure. If you are interested, call Charlie Donilon at 401-781-3944.

UNEXSO announces SharkLab:

A Shark Feeder and Behavior Course

Every day the staff of the Underwater Explorers Society (UNEXSO) hand-feed over two dozen Caribbean reef sharks at Shark Junction. Over the years, guest divers have watched in awe as the highly-trained UNEXSO Shark Team invite the sharp-toothed predators to lunch. Thousands of divers have safely witnessed the intense activity. Now, guests will have the opportunity to join UNEXSO's Shark Team by completing SharkLab: a Shark Feeder and Behavior Specialty Course. This new course will begin in Spring, 1996.

Ollie Ferguson, Vice President of Dive Operations at UNEXSO, says "Safety is, of course, our number one concern. We want participants in SharkLab to gain a better understanding and appreciation of these magnificent creatures. This carefully designed, multi-day diving and educational program gives participants the chance to hand-feed the sharks at Shark Junction in a controlled environment."

Shark Lab includes intensive course work in shark biology and behavior and marine ecology. Students will learn to use the tools and equipment of the UNEXSO Shark Team: a shark feeding tube and steel-mesh, chainmail shark suit and gloves. Under the watchful eye of UNEXSO's experienced instructor/feeders, the student will learn to use the chainmail suit, including buoyancy control and mobility. In UNEXSO's 18-foot deep tank, the student will practice diving with the suit and learn proper techniques for using the feeding tube. The student will also complete multiple dives at Shark Junction, observing sharks and learning feeding techniques—ultimately hand-feeding the reef sharks. A UNEXSO underwater videographer and photographer will document the event.

"The goal of SharkLab is to allow divers to learn more about these animals and become an ambassador for shark preservation," says Ollie Ferguson. "But there is nothing like the thrill of hand-feeding sharks."

A graduate of SharkLab becomes a member of UNEXSO's Shark Team, and will be presented with a course certificate, photo and video of the shark feeding experience, and press information. Adds Lori Wahl, Director of Marketing for UNEXSO, "SharkLab is a unique program for divers to develop an in-depth knowledge of shark behavior. But it's also a unique publicity opportunity for a dive shop or individual to share their experience and knowledge with friends, dive club, or even the local TV station or newspaper."

Lady of the Lake Ice Dive

The Board has set the date for the annual Lady of the Lake Ice Dive at Lake Winnepesaukee. The dive will occur on Saturday, February 24th, providing the ice is thick enough and weather is amenable. In order to be able to participate in this dive, everyone must have taken the UDNH ice diving training lesson, taught by Lea Nichols and Wayne Russell. This applies even to those that have non-UDNH ice dive experience. This year's ice diving training will be held as part of the UDNH meeting directly preceding the scheduled ice dive, namely on February 19th. Contact Wayne Russell at 603-669-7124 to sign up for the dive.

When You Pay Your 1996 Dues...

by Jake Richter, Club Secretary

In order to better serve its members, the UDNH Dive Club will be changing its annual membership renewal process. This process will also apply to new members.

Membership Survey

On the membership application you'll be filling out to help us update our member database, you'll also find a number of questions that will help provide the club with some background on your diving expertise, interests, and comments. Please be sure to fill the form out completely, as it will help the Board come up with interesting presentations, excursions, and events.

Member Directory

As part of being a 1996 UDNH member, you'll be receiving a membership packet. In the packet you'll find a UDNH membership directory - something that has long been missed by many members. The directory will contain the names, addresses, and phone numbers of all recent UDNH members so that you can contact potential dive buddies, people you've met at meetings and have found to share common interests, etc. Please note that the directories are for personal use only, and should absolutely not be used for soliciting business of any sort.

UDNH Club Constitution

Also in the membership packet will be the Club Constitution, also known as the Club Bylaws. When the Board dusted off the Bylaws recently, they discovered some rather arcane and archaic items contained within. The Board would like all UDNH members to review the Bylaws and make suggestions on how they might be better brought into the present.

Membership Cards

This year, the Club will also be introducing laminated membership cards. Your membership cards will normally be ready to be picked up the meeting after the one at which you paid your annual club dues. The Board will be working to add value to your UDNH Club membership by trying to arrange for special offers and discounts with various businesses in New Hampshire, and it's intended that your membership card be the identification you need to take advantage of such offers.

Name Tags

One comment heard from new members in the past couple of years was that it's difficult to know exactly who is who, and in many cases, a person can go to a year's worth of meetings and still only know just a handful of people by name. Well, Club members will also have permanent name tags waiting for them at each meeting, requiring that they only be clipped on for easy identification for your fellow attendees. For the first meeting, and new members, the old tried and true stick-on variety of name tag will be available. Who knows? This might lead to you finding a new dive buddy to explore the local waters with...

Among the major goals of the new Board is to increase the value of UDNH membership, and thereby, the size of the membership. The things listed here, as well as more frequent scheduled dives and other events, should help move us in that direction.

New "Decompression" Stop

Based on the questionable service at the few eating and drinking establishments club members used for their post-meeting Decompression stops, we will be checking out new locations in the coming months. Therefore, after the January 15th meeting, we'll adjourn to The Ground Round at the Mall of New Hampshire. The site has been scouted out, the food's good and reasonably priced. Best of all, it's served until Midnight and they have a full bar. The manager has also indicated that we can have a private room to ourselves. If that doesn't work out, suggestions for new places to try would be greatly appreciated.

Volunteers Needed for Boston Sea Rovers Show

The Board is looking for volunteers to help man the annual booth at the Boston Sea Rovers Clinic in Boston on March 2nd and 3rd at the Copley Plaza Hotel. Also sought are people interested in planning how to make best use of the show to attract new members and possibly raise some funds for the Club (perhaps via the sale of T-shirts or via a raffle?). Please contact Rick Bardsley at 603-673-8539 if you will be able to help out and promote the club, and/or help with planning the Club's presence at the Show.

UDNH Is Now On The Internet!

The United Divers of New Hampshire now has a presence on the Internet and the World Wide Web, courtesy of Stroke of Color, the company owned by Jake & Linda Richter. An overview of the club can be found on-line, along with archived copies of all of the 1995 Dive Log newsletters in Adobe Acrobat format. The UDNH site can be found via the following URL:

<http://www.strokeofcolor.com/udnh>

First Meeting Will Have Vote on Membership Dues

At the combined UDNH old Board/new Board meeting, the officers of the club determined that a small increase in dues was necessary to make sure the club maintains a certain level of finances for the year. These finances help subsidize the cost of the annual banquet held in November. The Board is proposing a change in dues as follows: keep the individual dues at $25, but increase family dues from $35 to $40. This reflects a $10 savings for a two-diver household, and more for more divers in a family.

The Club Bylaws require that the membership approve all dues changes at the first meeting of the year, so this issue will be brought up at the January 15th meeting for a membership vote.

UNITED DIVERS OF N. H.
NEWSLETTER

Manchester, N. H. May 1976 Volume 1 Number 2

Hi Everyone,

We are back to try again, we all hope you enjoyed our first newsletter.

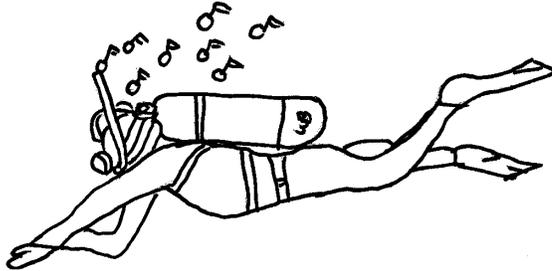

We would like to thank those of you who submitted articles and advertisements to the paper. They were helpful to us and interesting for all. If you have any articles or suggestions, let us know. Thanks again,

The Staff

In case you are not aware of it we do have use of the YWCA pool after every business meeting. It seems as though the ones who are taking advantage of this pool are really enjoying it! Well, they are playing all sorts of "games": "SHARK" is one of them. Did you ever see or hear of a group of sharks in a tagging frenzy? You will see thrashing bodies and swirling water and you just know the chase is on, but alas again they missed that one last solitary, tired swimmer. It happens all the time at the "Y" pool. And how about HOCKEY? How many of you enjoy the sport? Well, we have some of the all time great players. They skin their knuckles and maybe their knees but they all seem to thrive on it. The rules of the game are very simple and uncomplicated, it seems to me the words they used are JUNGLE LAW or RULES - the meaning*---- anything goes except drowning your fellow players (from either team), simple right? And of course there are RELAY RACES without any rules, (that I could see) which is always fun too! If you have never played PASS the BRICK in a relay race or even tried it while treading water you just can't begin to imagine the fun you are missing! Of course if you don't want to participate in the games you don't have to, but bring your fins, mask and snorkel anyway, (suit too), you can swim and have fun and do your own thing, in your own way.
SCUBA

Daffy Divers:

Recently, music has been heard by some divers - pronounced singing or humming (don't even know if it qualifies as that!) through a snorkel. Ed Perry was one of the first to hear it, and questioned if his dive buddy had a radio with him. Since the first time, a few more have had their ears tuned in, and their only comment is "WHAT IS THAT!" Well, it is, truly, a Daffy Diver, full of energy, keeping himself busy so he doesn't think about the long swim back to shore or the boat. Skip Morse says he does it for these reasons and Lou Babineau concurs, but is still a bit skeptical about a club song that can be sung in two-part "humony".

Here's what made news in the UDNH newsletter 20 years ago.

Club Meetings

Meetings are held the first and third Mondays of each month, except for January, November, and December, and when a meeting might interfere with the Independence Day or Labor Day holidays. We encourage potential members to attend a meeting or two to experience our club before joining. The meetings are held at the YMCA on 30 Mechanic St. in Manchester. The meetings start at 7:16 PM. Each meeting consists of a short business portion followed by a variety of presentations and discussions. Immediately following the club has an hour of pool time for swimming, trying out gear, and the occasional game of underwater hockey. Members and guests often meet afterwards at a local restaurant for food and drink.

Extreme Weather

Meetings will be held if the YMCA is open. You can call them at 603-623-3558. Check close to the meeting time as the front desk often has no advance warning of early closures.

Membership

Annual dues for membership for 1996 in the United Divers of New Hampshire are $25/individual or $40/family. Dues are not prorated for members who join later in the year. To join, please contact Jake Richter, 603-432-0234.

Get in the Swim

After every meeting, the YMCA pool is open to our dive club for an hour of fun and fitness.

Don't wait for the ice to thaw before trying out that new equipment, the pool is the perfect place. Check out the club calendar for special presentations in the pool like dive knife use or trying out a dry suit. So bring a suit and a towel to every meeting and get into the swim.
